LORETTA C. BIGGS, District Judge.

Before the Court is Plaintiff Lucy Rogers' Motion to Enforce Award and Enter Judgment, (ECF No. 326). The motion requests that the Court confirm a Final Award issued by Arbitrator Hon. Robert N. Hunter, Jr. ("Final Award") pursuant to 9 U.S.C. § 9 and enter judgment on behalf of Plaintiff against Defendant TitleMax of South Carolina, Inc. ("TitleMax") consistent with the Final Award. (Id.) Plaintiff also requests attorneys' fees. (Id.) For the reasons stated herein, Plaintiff's motion will be granted.

The Plaintiffs in this action allegedly entered into “car title loan” transactions with Defendants at unlawful rates of interest.¹ (See ECF No. 3.) Their Complaint alleged violations of the North Carolina Consumer Finance Act (“CFA”), North Carolina’s usury statutes, and the North Carolina Unfair and Deceptive Trade Practices Act (“UDTPA”). (ECF No. 3 at 7–8 (citing N.C. Gen. Stat. §§ 24-1.1, 53-165, 75-1.1).) On April 22, 2020, this Court compelled arbitration related to all but a few of the numerous Plaintiffs’ claims and ordered parties to notify the Court of any arbitration awards within seven days after arbitration concluded. (ECF No. 76 at 16.) The Plaintiff bringing this motion was a part of the claims ordered to arbitration.

Relevant to the present motion, in addition to considering liability, the Arbitrator considered, among other issues, whether application of North Carolina law to Plaintiff’s loans violated the Commerce Clause of the United States Constitution, and the proper measure of damages. (See ECF No. 326-1 at 3–4.) The Arbitrator determined that application of North Carolina law was proper and that TitleMax owed Plaintiff treble damages. (Id.) The Arbitrator therefore ordered TitleMax to pay to Plaintiff damages, which, after trebling, totaled $27,618.27. (Id. at 5.) The Arbitrator also awarded Plaintiff prejudgment interest and attorney’s fees of $11,000. (Id.)

Plaintiff then timely filed this motion seeking an order confirming the Arbitrator’s award and entering a judgment consistent with the award. (ECF No. 326.) As it has done with every other arbitration award against it related to its car title loans, TitleMax opposes the motion and has asked the Court to vacate the Final Award. (ECF No. 346 at 1.)

II. STANDARD OF REVIEW

Judicial review of an arbitration award “is among the narrowest known at law.” UBS Fin. Servs., Inc. v. Padussis, 842 F.3d 336, 339 (4th Cir. 2016) (quoting Apex Plumbing Supply, Inc. v. U.S. Supply Co., 142 F.3d 188, 193 (4th Cir. 1998)). Judicial review is “severely circumscribed. . . . [E]ven a mistake of fact or misinterpretation of law by an arbitrator provides insufficient grounds for the modification of an award.” Apex Plumbing, 142 F.3d at 193–94. The court does not sit to reevaluate evidence or review mistakes of law. Id. at 194. Instead, the reviewing court asks only “whether the arbitrators did the job they were told to do—not whether they did it well, or correctly, or reasonably, but simply whether they did it.” Three S Del., Inc. v. DataQuick Info. Sys., Inc., 492 F.3d 520, 527 (4th Cir. 2007) (quoting Remmey v. PaineWebber, Inc., 32 F.3d 143, 146 (4th Cir. 1994)).

Thus, courts may vacate or modify an arbitration award only under “limited circumstances.” Padussis, 842 F.3d at 339. The party opposing enforcement of the award bears the “heavy burden” of showing that grounds to vacate the award exist under either the Federal Arbitration Act (“FAA”) or common law. Three S Del., Inc., 492 F.3d at 527. Relevant to this case, an award is vacated at common law where “the award evidences a manifest disregard of the law.” Id. This high bar is reached only where (1) “the disputed legal principle is clearly defined and not subject to reasonable debate,” and (2) “the arbitrator refused to apply that legal principle.” Jones v. Dancel, 792 F.3d 395, 402 (4th Cir. 2015). Merely failing to explain a legal conclusion will not justify vacating an award where the legal reasoning can be inferred. United Steelworkers of Am. v. Enter. Wheel & Car Corp., 363 U.S. 593, 598 (1960). Further, “proving manifest disregard require[s] something beyond showing that the arbitrators misconstrued the law.” Wachovia Sec., LLC v. Brand, 671 F.3d 472, 481 (4th Cir. 2012).

Additionally, an award will be vacated under the FAA where the arbitrator “exceeded their powers, or so imperfectly executed them that a mutual, final, and definite award upon the subject matter submitted was not made.” 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(4). An imperfect execution of the agreement is not a sufficient cause to vacate: an award “even arguably construing or applying the contract must stand” under this provision of the FAA “regardless of a court’s view of its (de)merits.” Oxford Health Plans LLC v. Sutter, 569 U.S. 564, 569 (2013). An award that disposes of all issues is “mutual, final, and definite” even where the award does not detail the arbitrator’s full reasoning. See Remmey, 32 F.3d at 150. “Arbitrators have no obligation to the court to give their reasons for an award.” Enter. Wheel & Car Corp., 363 U.S. at 598.

III. DISCUSSION

A. The Arbitrator Did Not Manifestly Disregard the Dormant Commerce Clause

TitleMax first argues that the Final Award evidences a manifest disregard of the dormant Commerce Clause because it applies North Carolina law to loans that were executed outside of North Carolina. (ECF No. 346 at 5.) TitleMax claims that pursuant to the Fourth Circuit case Carolina Trucks & Equipment, Inc. v. Volvo Trucks of North America, Inc., 492 F.3d 484 (4th Cir. 2007), this application of North Carolina law to the loans violates the clearly defined principle of law that “one state may not project its legislation into another, as the Commerce Clause precludes the application of a state statute to conduct that takes place wholly outside of the State’s borders, whether or not the commerce has effects within the State.” (ECF No. 346 at 5–6 (quoting Carolina Trucks, 492 F.3d at 489–90).)

However, as this Court explained the last time that TitleMax sought to vacate an arbitration award using this argument, “the law as applied to the facts in this case is not so ‘well-established.’” See Goins v. TitleMax of Va., Inc., No. 19-CV-489, 2021 WL 3856164, at *2 (M.D.N.C. Aug. 27, 2021) (quoting ECF No. 104 at 8).

A statute can violate the dormant Commerce Clause in two ways. See McBurney v. Young, 667 F.3d 454, 468 (4th Cir. 2012); Env’t Tech. Council v. Sierra Club, 98 F.3d 774, 785 (4th Cir.

1996). First, a law is per se unconstitutional if it discriminates against out-of-state transactions. Sierra Club, 98 F.3d at 785. Second, where a law does not discriminate, it is constitutional “unless the burden imposed on interstate commerce is clearly excessive in relation to the putative local benefits.” McBurney, 667 F.3d at 468 (citing Pike v. Bruce Church, Inc., 397 U.S. 137, 142 (1970)). This second test “frequently requires judges to make highly subjective calls” in evaluating state interests. Colon Health Ctrs. of Am., LLC, v. Hazel, 813 F.3d 145, 156 (4th Cir. 2016). Because judges are “ill-equipped to second-guess the empirical judgments of lawmakers concerning the utility of legislation,” courts presume that nondiscriminatory statutes are constitutional and give “due deference to the body whose primary responsibility it is to judge the benefits and burdens of . . . legislation: the [state] legislature.” Id. (internal quotations omitted). Consequently, nondiscriminatory laws receive rational basis review under the dormant Commerce Clause. Id.

First, contrary to TitleMax’s contentions here, Carolina Trucks does not plainly and definitively establish that the Commerce Clause prohibits North Carolina from regulating car title loans made outside its boundaries. As this Court previously noted, Carolina Trucks was decided on statutory and not constitutional grounds. Goins, No. 19-CV-489, 2021 WL 3856164, at *3 (“[T]he one Fourth Circuit case [that TitleMax] cited, Carolina Trucks . . . was decided on statutory and not constitutional grounds.”); Carolina Trucks, 492 F.3d at 489 (“By reaching this holding as a matter of statutory construction, we avoid constitutional problems inherent in a broader interpretation of South Carolina law.”). Additionally, as the Third Circuit recently observed in a case involving, among other things, car title loans made by TitleMax of Virginia, Inc., Carolina Trucks “involved transactions in goods that ended at the point of sale,” and such transactions are not analogous to TitleMax loans, which have “a longer lifespan,” and “involve[] later payments and permit[] a physical taking (repossession) from inside another state.” TitleMax of Del., Inc. v. Weissmann, 24 F.4th 230, 239 (3d Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. TitleMax of Del., Inc. v. Vague, 142 S. Ct. 2870 (2022). Accordingly, the Arbitrator’s failure to reach TitleMax’s preferred legal conclusion does not evidence a manifest disregard for the Commerce Clause as interpreted by the Fourth Circuit in Carolina Trucks.

Second, as demonstrated by the Third Circuit case, there is ample room to reasonably argue that a state can regulate car title loans made to its residents while they were outside its borders. In Weissmann, the Third Circuit considered whether Pennsylvania’s usury laws could be applied to TitleMax loans made outside of Pennsylvania, and, after conducting a full constitutional analysis, the Third Circuit concluded that application of Pennsylvania law to the loans did not violate the Commerce Clause. Id. at 234–35, 237–41 (“Pennsylvania may therefore investigate and apply its usury laws to TitleMax without violating the Commerce Clause.”). That the Third Circuit has rejected TitleMax’s interpretation of the dormant Commerce Clause as applied to its car title loans and state usury laws suggests a weakness in TitleMax’s arguments. However, with respect to the issue before the court—whether the Final Award must be vacated because the Arbitrator manifestly disregarded the Commerce Clause—this Court does review whether the Arbitrator’s legal conclusion was correct or not. The question for this Court is whether the Arbitrator refused to apply a clearly defined principle of law not subject to reasonable debate, and Weissmann demonstrates that TitleMax’s proposed principle of law is, at minimum, subject to reasonable debate.²

² TitleMax has argued that the Arbitrator erred by citing Weissman as supporting the Final Award because, according to TitleMax, Weissman created a circuit split between the Third Circuit and the

Accordingly, the Court finds that the Arbitrator did not manifestly disregard the Commerce Clause by applying North Carolina law to Plaintiff's loan.

B. The Arbitrator Did Not Manifestly Disregard North Carolina Law Regarding the Calculation of Damages

TitleMax also argues that the Arbitrator manifestly disregarded North Carolina law by conflating the frameworks for determining damages under North Carolina's CFA and UDTPA. (ECF No. 346 at 7–11.) Specifically, TitleMax argues that the Arbitrator improperly calculated the treble damages available to Plaintiff under the UDTPA by using a CFA penalty as the base of the treble damages calculation, rather than the “injury done” or “actual damages” suffered by Plaintiff. (Id.) TitleMax contends that by choosing the wrong base damages figure to treble, the Arbitrator manifestly disregarded North Carolina law against duplicate recoveries of punitive damages. (Id.)

TitleMax has failed to satisfy its burden of showing that the Arbitrator manifestly disregarded the law. TitleMax's argument does nothing more than challenge the Arbitrator's interpretation of applicable law—something courts have consistently held will not warrant the vacating of an arbitration award. See, e.g., Interactive Brokers LLC v. Saroop, 969 F.3d 438, 443 (4th Cir. 2020) (“When parties consent to arbitration, and thereby consent to extremely limited appellate review, they assume the risk that the arbitrator may interpret the law in a way with which they disagree.” (quoting Wachovia, 671 F.3d at 478 n.5)); SmartSky Networks, LLC v. Wireless Sys. Sols., LLC, No. 20-CV-000834, 2022 WL 353801, at *5 (M.D.N.C. Feb. 7, 2022)

Fourth Circuit, and the Arbitrator should therefore have rejected Weissman in favor of Carolina Trucks. (ECF No. 346 at 6 n.2.) However, the existence of a circuit split only bolsters the point that reasonable minds can disagree about TitleMax's proposed legal principle, and, moreover, unlike decisions of this Court, decisions of the Arbitrator are not appealable to the Fourth Circuit.

(“A district court may not overturn an arbitration award ‘just because it believes, however strongly, that the arbitrators misinterpreted the applicable law.’” (quoting Wachovia, 671 F.3d at 478 n.5)).

The CFA provides that a party in violation of the CFA “shall not collect, receive, or retain any principal or charges whatsoever with respect to the loan.” N.C. Gen. Stat. § 53-166. The UDTPA provides that “if damages are assessed [for committing an unfair and deceptive trade practice] judgment shall be rendered . . . for treble the amount fixed by the verdict.” N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-16. Here, the Arbitrator determined that TitleMax violated the CFA, that “compensatory” damages were $9,306.09, and then trebled that figure under the UDTPA to reach total damages of $27,618.27. (ECF No. 326-1 at 4–5.)

It is not for this Court to determine whether the Arbitrator’s interpretation of the CFA and its interplay with the UDTPA is correct. Under the “severely circumscribed” standard of review of arbitration awards, it is enough that the Arbitrator provided some basis for the assessment and calculations of damages. The Court finds that the Arbitrator did so here—the Arbitrator identified a damages figure based on a statute and then trebled that figure based on another statute. Even if TitleMax were correct that the Arbitrator picked the wrong base damages figure to treble and consequently awarded improper duplicative punitive damages, the Arbitrator’s error would be merely a mistake of statutory interpretation, which is not grounds to vacate the award.

C. This Court Will Not Recalculate the Arbitrator's Award of Attorney's Fees

TitleMax also asks that this Court either vacate the Arbitrator's award of attorney's fees or reduce the amount awarded. (ECF No. 346 at 12–17.) TitleMax makes several arguments in support of this request, none of which have any merit.

TitleMax first argues that this Court should vacate the Arbitrator's award of attorney's fees entirely because the Arbitrator awarded the fees pursuant to N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-16.1(1) without making certain necessary findings based on the evidence presented at arbitration. (Id. at 13–14.) However, the Arbitrator plainly did make the necessary findings, and it is not for this Court to reevaluate the evidence the Arbitrator relied on and draw a different conclusion. N.C. Gen. Stat. § 75-16.1(1) authorizes a court (or an arbitrator) to “allow a reasonable attorney fee . . . upon a finding [that] the [defendant] . . . willfully engaged in the [unfair and deceptive] act . . . and there was an unwarranted refusal by such party to fully resolve the matter which constitutes the basis of [the] suit.” Regarding willfulness, the Arbitrator determined that TitleMax's very “business model” was “willful,” as was “the operation of their business with [Plaintiff].” (ECF No. 32601 at 4.) Having reviewed all the parties' submissions and presided over an evidentiary hearing, (id. at 1), it was the Arbitrator's prerogative to make this determination. Regarding an unwarranted refusal to settle, the Arbitrator stated in the Final Award that “TitleMax refused to reasonably settle the claims both before and after litigation had begun,” (id.), and, as TitleMax itself points out, the Arbitrator had evidence before him that showed the course of the parties' settlement discussions when he made this determination, (ECF No. 346 at 14 & n.6). Accordingly, TitleMax's first argument is not persuasive.

TitleMax next argues that the fee amount awarded was “unreasonable, incorrect, excessive, and the product of redundant and demonstrably false entries in a declaration submitted by Plaintiff’s counsel,” and therefore, “[a]t a minimum, this Court should significantly reduce the award to exclude all unsupported, excessive or otherwise unreasonable or unnecessary hours claimed, as well as any clerical work and expert charges Plaintiff’s counsel seeks to improperly lump into the fee request.” (ECF No. 346 at 14–17.) In other words, TitleMax contends that this Court should review Plaintiff’s counsel’s billing records and recalculate the fees that were awarded by the Arbitrator. (Id.) Given the applicable standard of review, this argument is meritless. Plaintiff’s counsel’s billing records were evidence submitted to the Arbitrator, and a court reviewing an arbitration award does not reevaluate evidence. Additionally, the Court notes that the Arbitrator set out eight non-exclusive factors that he considered in determining the amount of fees and specified that he was awarding less than what Plaintiff’s counsel requested.³ (ECF No. 326-1 at 4.) Thus, it is clear the Arbitrator gave due consideration to the issue of fees, and TitleMax’s arguments about reductions for poor record keeping—which it admits it already presented to the Arbitrator, (ECF No. 346 at 16)—are not grounds for this Court to vacate or modify the Final Award.

³ TitleMax contends that the Arbitrator’s award of \$11,000 in attorney’s fees exceeded what could be mathematically explained by the submissions. (ECF No. 346 at 16 n.8). According to an exhibit from the arbitration that TitleMax has submitted in support of its opposition, Plaintiff’s counsel requested fees for 31 hours of work at a rate of \$425 per hour. (ECF No. 346-4 at 3, 10–11.) The Final Award states that Plaintiff’s counsel’s “hourly fee of approximately \$350.00 an hour . . . is reasonable.” (ECF No. 326-1 at 4.) As TitleMax points out, $31 \times 350 = 10,850$. However, the Court notes that the Final Award says that a rate of “approximately \$350.00 an hour” was reasonable, (id.), and Plaintiff’s counsel also requested fees for an expert witness in addition for attorney’s fees, (ECF No. 346-4 at 3). Under these circumstances, the Court finds that there was some basis for the Arbitrator to award more than \$10,850 in fees, and the Court therefore will not disturb this award due to the potential mathematical discrepancy. If the \$11,000 was a clerical error, TitleMax could have contacted AAA within 20 days of the issuance of the award to request a correction pursuant to AAA Consumer Arbitration Rule 47.

D. Plaintiff Is Entitled to Attorneys' Fees

Finally, Plaintiff requests that “additional attorneys’ fees or some other remedy should be awarded for having to continue to file these Motions and Replies and then requiring the Court [to devote] significant resources to [enter] Orders and Judgment.” (ECF No. 327 at 2.) In TitleMax’s opposition brief, TitleMax does not address Plaintiff’s request for attorneys’ fees. (See ECF No. 346.)

“[W]ithout statutory authorization or contractual agreement between the parties, the prevailing American rule is that each party in federal litigation pays his own attorney’s fees.” Am. Reliable Ins. Co. v. Stillwell, 336 F.3d 311, 320 (4th Cir. 2003) (citing Alyeska Pipeline Serv. Co. v. Wilderness Soc’y, 421 U.S. 240, 247, 263–64 (1975)). The burden is on the party seeking attorneys’ fees to “identify [a] statutory or common law basis that would support” such an award. Id.

Here, Plaintiff identifies two authorities to support an award of attorneys’ fees. (ECF No. 327 at 2–3.) First, Plaintiff argues that the North Carolina Revised Uniform Arbitration Act allows for an award of “reasonable attorneys’ fees and other reasonable expenses of litigation incurred in a judicial proceeding after the award is made to a judgment confirming . . . an award.” (Id.); N.C. Gen. Stat. § 1-569.25(c). Under this standard, a court has discretion to award attorneys’ fees to “promote[] the statutory policy of finality of arbitration awards” and discourage “all but the most meritorious challenges.” Astanza Design, LLC v. Gjemme Stile, S.p.A., 220 F. Supp. 3d 641, 653 (M.D.N.C. 2016) (quoting § 1-569.25(c) cmt. 3). Alternatively, Plaintiff argues that awarding attorneys’ fees is within the Court’s “inherent authority.” (ECF No. 327 at 3 (citing Int’l Chem. Workers Union (AFL-CIO), Loc. No. 227 v. BASF Wyandotte Corp., 774 F.2d 43, 47 (2d Cir. 1985)). “[I]n narrowly defined circumstances federal courts have inherent power to assess attorney’s fees against counsel.” Chambers v. NASCO, Inc., 501 U.S. 32, 45 (1991) (quoting Roadway Express, Inc. v. Piper, 447 U.S. 752, 765 (1980)). One such circumstance occurs “when the losing party has ‘acted in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons’” Roadway Express, 447 U.S. at 766 (quoting F. D. Rich Co. v. U. S. ex rel. Indus. Lumber Co., 417 U.S. 116, 129 (1974)). A party “shows bad faith by delaying or disrupting the litigation or by hampering enforcement of a court order.” Chambers, 501 U.S. at 46 (quoting Hutto v. Finney, 437 U.S. 678, 690 n.14 (1978)).⁴

The Court finds that the purposes of N.C. Gen. Stat. § 1-569.25(c) are served by awarding attorneys’ fees to Plaintiffs.

TitleMax’s objections to the arbitration awards are not meritorious. As discussed in this Order and the Court’s previous Orders confirming other arbitration awards in this case, judicial review of an arbitration award “is among the narrowest known at law.” Padussis, 842 F.3d at 339. “[E]ven a mistake of fact or misinterpretation of law by an arbitrator provides insufficient grounds for the modification of an award,” and a reviewing court will not reevaluate evidence or review mistakes of law. Apex Plumbing, 142 F.3d at 194. Nevertheless, TitleMax advances arguments that amount only to contentions that the Arbitrator applied the law in ways that TitleMax disagreed with. These arguments do not warrant vacating the award, and given the history of this case, TitleMax was well aware of this when it decided to oppose Plaintiff’s motion. This Court has previously considered and rejected the arguments that

TitleMax made here. (ECF Nos. 141 at 5–7 (finding that it was not a well-established principle of constitutional law that North Carolina cannot regulate TitleMax loans made to North Carolina residents while they were outside the boundaries of the North Carolina)); 171 at 5–7 (finding that TitleMax’s argument about trebling damages without first subtracting the value of the original loan was “nothing more than [a] challenge [to] the Arbitrator’s interpretation of applicable law”).) Indeed, most of TitleMax’s argument here regarding trebling of damages was copied and pasted from a prior filing. (Compare ECF No. 346 at 7–12, with ECF No. 163 at 9–14.) Moreover, this Court has previously awarded attorneys’ fees against TitleMax in this case for making that specific non-meritorious argument instead of complying with an arbitrator’s award. (ECF No. 171 at 8–9.)

For the foregoing reasons, the Court in its discretion will award attorneys’ fees.

Regarding the amount of such fees, Plaintiff’s attorney has filed a declaration stating that he spent 1.5 hours on this matter since the award of the arbitrator and requesting a rate of $350 per hour for that time, which he represents is the customary hourly rate in this market for attorneys of similar experience. (ECF No. 348-1 ¶¶ 5–6.) One and a half hours at $350 per hour totals $525.

TitleMax having not mentioned any objections in its opposition brief and the Court having considered the record in this case, Plaintiff’s declaration, the course of this litigation, and the factors affecting the lodestar analysis set out in Barber v. Kimbrell’s, Inc., 577 F.2d 216, 226 & n.28 (4th Cir. 1978), the Court finds that Plaintiff’s requested attorney’s fees for 1.5 hours at the rate of $350 per hour is reasonable. The Court has previously found that $350 per hour is a reasonable rate for Plaintiff’s counsel’s work dealing with TitleMax’s meritless oppositions to arbitration awards in this case given the market rate in this area. (ECF No. 249 at 4.) Additionally, while Plaintiff's counsel's declaration could be clearer regarding the precise breakdown of the time that he spent confirming the award, (ECF No. 348-1 ¶ 7), in light of the amount of time that this Court has spent on this matter and TitleMax's opposition, this Court finds that 1.5 hours is a reasonable amount of time for Plaintiff's counsel to take in obtaining confirmation of the Final Award.

E. Additional Remedy Sought

Finally, with respect to Plaintiff's request for "some other remedy . . . for having to continue to file these Motions and Replies and then requiring the Court [to devote] significant resources to [enter] Orders and Judgment," (ECF No. 327 at 2), the Court cautions TitleMax and its attorneys that Rule 11 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure states that an attorney who presents a paper to a court certifies that to the best of his or her knowledge "it is not being presented for any improper purpose, such as to harass, cause unnecessary delay, or needlessly increase the cost of litigation," and that "the claims, defenses, and other legal contentions are warranted by existing law or by a nonfrivolous argument for extending, modifying, or reversing existing law or for establishing new law." Fed. R. Civ. P. 11(b)(1) & (2). TitleMax's pattern of resisting every arbitration award entered against it by repeating, verbatim, arguments which this Court has deemed meritless and has previously rejected appears to suggest an improper purpose.⁵ Several courts have recognized that "attempt[s] to

⁵ TitleMax claims in its opposition brief that it "recognizes that this Court has previously denied [its] motions to vacate arbitration awards," but contends that it submitted its present opposition "to preserve its appellate rights on all matters referenced herein." (ECF No. 333 at 4 n.3.) The record of this case does not support that assertion. During the course of this litigation, TitleMax has filed only one appeal (which was consolidated with an appeal from a companion case). (See ECF Nos. 171; 172; 178; 183; 184.) Specifically, TitleMax appealed a Memorandum Opinion and Order and an

Accordingly, this Court hereby places TitleMax on notice that what appears to be its litigation strategy of opposing confirmation of arbitration awards routinely using meritless arguments that this Court has already considered and rejected may result in imposition of Rule 11 sanctions.

For the reasons stated herein, the Court enters the following:

accompanying Judgment that rejected the argument about improper trebling of damages that TitleMax repeated almost verbatim in its present opposition. (See ECF No. 171 at 4–7.) TitleMax moved this Court to certify its Judgment as final for the purposes of facilitating the appeal, (ECF Nos. 176; 177), and this Court granted that motion, (ECF No. 248). However, TitleMax then voluntarily dismissed its consolidated appeal a few days after Plaintiffs-Appellees filed their response brief. (See Goines v. TitleMax of Va., Inc., No. 22-2005, ECF Nos. 30–35 (4th Cir.)) Under the circumstances of this case, this behavior does not appear consistent with a sincere desire for the Fourth Circuit to pass on TitleMax’s contentions.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant TitleMax of South Carolina, Inc., is ORDERED to pay to Plaintiff Lucy Rogers damages of $27,618.27 as set forth in the Arbitrator's Final Award, (ECF No. 326-1 at 4). This sum is due and payable immediately upon filing of the Judgment.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant TitleMax of South Carolina, Inc., is ORDERED to pay to Plaintiff prejudgment interest on the compensatory portion of the damages award (that is, on the $9,306.09 attributable to the amounts that TitleMax collected from Plaintiff) as set forth in the Arbitrator's Final Award. This prejudgment interest accrued at the North Carolina legal rate of eight percent from the date of the filing of the Complaint (April 2, 2019) until the date of entry of the Judgment. This prejudgment interest is due and payable immediately upon filing of the Judgment.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant TitleMax of South Carolina, Inc., is ORDERED to pay to Plaintiff prejudgment interest on the remainder of the damages award (that is, on the $18,412.18 attributable to UDTPA trebling) as set forth in the Arbitrator's Final Award. This prejudgment interest accrued at the North Carolina legal rate of eight percent from the date of the filing of the Complaint (April 2, 2019) until the date of entry of the Judgment. This prejudgment interest is due and payable immediately upon filing of the Judgment.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant TitleMax of South Carolina, Inc., is ORDERED to pay to Plaintiff attorney's fees of $11,525 (that is, $11,000 as awarded by the Final Award plus $525 as awarded by this Court), which shall be due and payable immediately upon filing of the Judgment.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Defendant TitleMax of South Carolina, Inc., is ORDERED to pay to Plaintiff post-judgment interest on the total of all sums set forth in the Judgment (that is, the sum of: the $27,618.27 awarded by the Final Award, plus the pre-judgment interest owed on the $9,306.09 compensatory portion of the Final Award, plus the pre-judgment interest owed on the $18,412.18 UDTPA portion of the Final Award, plus the $11,525 of attorney's fees) at the federal statutory rate that shall accrue until all sums set forth in the Judgment are paid in full.

Judgment will be entered simultaneously with this Order.

This, the 9th day of May 2023.
